CLUB BOOK

FALL 2013

HISTORY & FACTS

Club History

Omega Phi was founded in the Spring of 2012 by Stephen Albers, Carter Wright, and Derek Molina. After they thought up the idea of creating a new club in the Fall of 2011, but not gaining much student support, the three sat on the idea. In the Spring they started looking again, and found that there were in fact now students interested in joining a new social club.

After informal mixers and meetings, a charter member class of 31 combined upper and lower classmen was formed. Stephen Albers assumed the Presidency, while he appointed Austin Collum and Christopher Briggs as Vice Presidents, along with Derek Molina and Josh Goslowsky as Spiritual Life directors.

Eventually, the rest of the officers were appointed with a few vote-ins, and Omega Phi was officially formed. The club chose Proverbs 27:17 as the club verse, signifying the ideals of servanthood and brotherhood with our fellow members; this is represented graphically by a hammer, used to refine metal as members refine each other. The hymn "Still" was selected as the club song, as it speaks about God's grace, providence, and salvation, three things that members seek and help each other seek.

The Constitution of Omega Phi took "all summer," according to former President Albers; even in the first semester of the Fall term of 2012, Constitutional amendments were passed, further shaping the club as Omega Phi inducted its first class of new members. During this process, our first three sponsors, Ken Bissel, Jake Brownfield, and John Mark Warnick, lent their wisdom and guidance, greatly helping the administrative officers clear a path for the future of the club by way of selecting club protocols and identifying traditions.

During this first active semester, three great traditions were developed through Club Week: an annual cookout and activity with Sigma Phi Mu, the proliferation of the hammer as a unifying symbol of Omega Phi, and, perhaps most famously, the club's "Drop the O" chant during Club Week. "O-Phi," as the club is nicknamed, queened 3 girls during this time; Casey Miller, Kaylee Chilton of Chi Omega Pi, and Kate Parker of Delta Gamma Rho.

As a club with around 70 members after the new member class, Omega Phi carried out typical club activities such as functions, devotionals, and participated in club athletics, eventually earning both "A" and "B" Team Small Club Championship awards.

Once again, Omega Phi looks to new applicants of the Social Club process as the potential future of the club, seeking leaders, brothers, and accountability.
